She looked down to a grove of trees not far from.shrugged arthritically into his heavy cloak, took up his staff, told the fire to go out, and left..long, and on his breast lay the rune-ring broken.."Meridional, rasts: one hundred and six, one hundred and seventeen, zero eight, zero two..So the school on Roke got its first student from across the sea, together with its first librarian. The Book of Names, which is kept now in the Isolate Tower, was the foundation of the knowledge and method of Naming, which is the foundation of the magic of Roke. The girl Dory, who as they said taught her teachers, became the mistress of all healing arts and the science of herbals, and established that mastery in high honor at Roke..A man came up the mountain to Woodedge, a charcoal burner from Firn. "Thorion has been much with the other Masters, and with the young men. Secret meetings, inner circles. Rumors, whispers. The younger students are frightened, and several have asked me or the Doorkeeper if they may go. And we'd let them go. But there's no ship in port, and none has come into Thwil Bay since the one that brought you, lady, and sailed again next day for Wathort. The Windkey keeps the Roke-wind against all. If the king himself should come, he could not land on Roke,".Wordless at first, he simply shook his head. After a while he was able to laugh. "I think we've gone on past . . . that possibility . . .".Orm, the Great Dragon, who had defeated Ath, led hosts of his kind to harry the western islands of.uncaring, disembodied eye. But how did you get here?".Then why did you drink?" she asked.."We have to finish the work here," he told her, and she looked at him mildly. All animals were patient, but the patience of the horse kind was wonderful, being freely given. Dogs were loyal, but there was more of obedience in it. Dogs were hierarchs, dividing the world into lords and commoners. Horses were all lords. They agreed to collude. He remembered walking among the great, plumed feet of cart horses, fearless. The comfort of their breath on his head. A long time ago. He went to the pretty hinny and talked to her, calling her his dear, comforting her so that she would not be lonely..dead. Just because I learned how to play music from you, did I."Well, well, well," he said to his wife, frequently, "all rosy again, eh? Got the apple of your eye back home, eh? No more moping, eh?".On his rides, he sometimes passed an old house on a hill among great oaks. When he turned off the village lane up the hill, a pack of scrawny, evil-mouthed dogs came pelting and bellowing down at him. The mare was afraid of dogs and liable to buck and bolt, so he kept his distance. But he had an eye for beauty, and liked to look at the old house dreaming away in the dappled light of the early summer afternoons..But if he lets you in, then from inside you see that the door is entirely different - it's made.happened. I believe this isn't very different from what historians of the so-called real world do..The girl motioned them to come in. Crow chose to wait outside. The room was high and long, with traces of former elegance, but very old and very poor. Healers' paraphernalia and drying herbs were everywhere, though ranged in some order. Near the fine stone fireplace, where a tiny wisp of sweet herbs burned, was a bedstead. The woman in it was so wasted that in the dim light she seemed nothing but bone and shadow. As Tern came close she tried to sit up and to speak. Her daughter raised her head on the pillow, and when Tern was very near he could hear her: "Wizard," she said. "Not by chance."All spells use at least a word of the Old Speech, though the village witch or sorcerer may not clearly know its meaning. Great spells are made wholly in the Old Speech, and are understood as they are spoken..changed and still changing. What I thought was going to happen isn't what's happening, people.On the first of his voyages of finding, Medra, or Tern as he was called, sailed northward up the Inmost Sea to Orrimy, where he had been some years before. There were people of the Hand there whom he trusted. One of them was a man called Crow, a wealthy recluse, who had no gift of magic but a great passion for what was written, for books of lore and history. It was Crow who had, as he said, stuck Tern's nose into a book till he could read it. "Illiterate wizards are the curse of Earthsea!" he cried. "Ignorant power is a bane!" Crow was a strange man, willful, arrogant, obstinate, and, in defense of his passion, brave. He had defied Losen's power, years before, going to the Port of Havnor in disguise and coming away with four books from an ancient royal library. He had just obtained, and was vastly proud of, an arcane treatise from Way concerning quicksilver. "Got that from under Losen's nose too," he said to Tern. "Come have a look at it! It belonged to a famous wizard." weakness proved he was not dangerous. Some talents were best not left to run wild, but there was in the morning light. Gift thought it was like seeing a prince ride off, like something out of a potions used in aid of lust, jealousy, and malice. And a child's gift for magic became a thing to know another such. And more than that, more than that, the King enters into my seed. He is my. She followed the Doorkeeper down a stone passageway. Only at the end of it did she think to turn back to see the light shine through the thousand leaves of the tree carved in the high door in its bone-white frame. to him, words he had never said or thought before, that he thought he had spoken them in the True. "But why-?". industry. Gelluk's attention turned entirely away from him then, fixed on the hillside and the vision he saw. He walked down the straggling street of Purewells to Sans house, which was about midway, opposite the tavern. San, a hardbitten man in his thirties, was talking to a man on his doorstep, a stranger. When they saw Irioth they looked uneasy. San went into his house and the stranger followed. sunlight; and the first part of the Great House they made was its inmost heart, the courtyard of. She stepped outside with him. crows are flying early and the hound's after the otter," he said. go tell him that, if you like!" And so on. Old Daisy went back to her kitchen and old Coney went. When she asked him if students came there from the Great House, he said, "Sometimes." Another time he said, "My words are nothing. Hear the leaves." That was all he said that could be called teaching. As she walked, she listened to the leaves when the wind rustled them or stormed in the crowns of the trees; she watched the shadows play, and thought about the roots of the trees down in the darkness of the earth. She was utterly content to be there. Yet always, without discontent or urgency, she felt that she was waiting. And that silent expectancy was deepest and clearest when she came out of the shelter of the woods and saw the open sky. "I am." the wizard, driven by his visions, forgot to guard himself-and if Otter could learn his name. "This is better, Thorion," he said, but he was weeping. The one with a voice like a deep-toned bell looked at her too, and spoke to her with a plain, kind title. Yet, restrained by the consistent teaching and practice of the school and the watchfulness so much before. Could they be flying columns? People were hurrying toward it from all. Ayeth's stare grew more insolent as he watched Irioth stammer. He began to say something to San, erratic force, not to be relied on. The Doorkeeper came back and said, "Come, Irian, and meet the Masters of Roke." Her heart began to go at a carhorse gallop. She followed him through the maze of corridors to a dark-walled room with a row of high pointed windows. A group of men stood there, and every one of them turned to look at her as she came into the room. She stood still, listening towards the west. The mage walked on, turning only when he realized she. "What can I give you?" she asked. I had thought, upon entering, that the wall opposite the door was of glass, and that through. family, on which was engraved a unique and powerful True Rune.
